

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

When an operator inputs a login ID of a member and a password thereof using a terminal and they are confirmed by a point server, a Web server receives an order of goods.

When the operator designates the number of points for payment and issues order
5 information, the point server assigns the points to this member according to the sum total of purchase prices. The Web sever requests a settlement server about settlement using settlement points per a part where no point is used, and the settlement server performs settlement processing. When settlement is ended, the point server determines a variation in the points of the members.
